LOOK FORWARD

By
Marcel Reinard

LONDON'S favourite panto has returned in spectacular fashion, putting the spotlight on a new chapter for its Hackney Empire home.

This season's 'Jack and the Beanstalk' production – starring panto legend Clive Rowe, and written and directed by Susie McKenna – received critical praise and has already made £100,000 more than last year's show at this point in the run, according to the theatre's Interim Chief Executive, Clarie Middleton.

She said: "Our philosophy is to do less, better. We're introducing new strands of programmes for a great night out of comedy, dance and music.

"In 2011, we're bringing percussionists Drum Chasers; Irish dancing for the 21st century; comedy for different local cultures; and the English Touring Opera among others."

She added there will also be modern variety and burlesque shows and more music concerts at the iconic theatre in Mare Street.

"Our driving values are quality, diversity and inclusion. But none of these are new to the Empire, it's the theatre's essence, its DNA. We're also now doing better business deals to curb losses," she added.

In September 2009, there were press reports saying the Empire 'would go dark for nine months' after 'accumulating more than £1.5 million of debts'.

The Arts Council and Hackney Council stepped in with an extra financial support package, and Clarie was appointed to help revive the theatre, after dealing with similar situations, most recently at the Bristol Old Vic.

She is optimistic about the Empire's future and points to highlights already this year, including headline acts like Arcade Fire, Mark Ronson and comedy show Strictly Come Laughing, which all packed out the 109-year-old theatre.

Clarrie said further partnerships are being explored for 2011, with touring companies and arts organisations like the Barbican, which the Empire worked with this year.

"We've had full events. We are here and people are coming," Clarie added.

Cllr Jonathan McShane, Cabinet Member for Community Services, said: "The Empire is a vibrant theatre at the heart of the borough's cultural life.

"We're delighted that the panto is so successful.

"The Council will continue to support the Empire to ensure it can thrive and carry on entertaining audiences from across London."

Stoked up for Christmas

Above & below: scenes from the Festive Tea Dance on 8 December – first in a series of Christmas events at Stoke Newington Town Hall

By

Gareth Greene

A SERIES of festive events at Stoke Newington Town Hall twirled into action with a tea dance on 8 December.

The afternoon saw older residents and visitors – many dressed in seasonal red – strut their stuff to the sounds of ever-popular DJ, Mr Wonderful.

There were also carols and a hoedown on 11 December, and cabaret for young and old on 12 December.

Still to come, is a free Christmas market offering gifts, vintage goodies and food on 18 and 19 December, from 11am to 5pm. At the same time, a Santa's grotto with a twist will accept donations of gifts for children staying at Homerton hospital over the Christmas period.

And on 20 December there will be three screenings of Christmas film classics in the former council chamber. Tickets cost £3.50. Wrapping up festivities will be a Sing-A-Long-A-Christmas with the London Gay Men's Chorus on 21 December. Expect a selection of Christmas favourites and show tunes.

Come down and enjoy a brilliant atmosphere in Stoke Newington this Christmas

Tickets cost £15 or £20, and the evening kicks off at 7.30pm.

Deputy Mayor of Hackney, Cllr Karen Alcock, said: "I really encourage people in Hackney and beyond to come down and enjoy a brilliant atmosphere in Stoke Newington this Christmas."

tenants and residents associations also attended.

Murray Grove Post Office closed in June 2008, along with six other Hackney branches, under the Post Office Network Change Programme. The Council decided to try to reopen it after a public consultation last summer showed strong support amongst residents and local businesses.

The branch now offers a range of postal and banking services, as well as other services like foreign currency exchange. It is also re-employing local staff who worked at the Post Office before it closed.

The Council will fund it initially, with a review after two years to assess levels of use and financial viability. The Post Office opened for business in October after Mr Patel relocated his chemist's business from other premises in Murray Grove to the site.

Over tea at the nearby Provost Estate Community Hall, Fairbank estate resident Edith Sullivan, 89, said she and her neighbours were pleased to be able to use the Post Office again.

For more than two years they have had to make the longer trip to Old Street and Hoxton Street.

Barry Sewell, of Floyd and Son funeral directors in Murray Grove, added that it is much more convenient and efficient for local businesses to use the re-opened Murray Grove branch.

Jules Pipe, Mayor of Hackney, said: “It is vital that the Post Office is supported by those in the area using it regularly, so the Council can keep it open on a long-term basis.”

Message from the Mayor

A bright year, an uncertain future

AS we prepare to welcome 2011, it's worth reviewing the borough's highlights for this year, as well as the challenges facing us in the future.

2010 saw Hackney finally connected properly to London's tube network for the first time with the opening of four new Overground stations. This historic achievement is part of the transport and regeneration legacy that the Council has been seeking for many years. Getting a high frequency line in Hackney that now appears on all tube maps connects our residents to jobs and services across London and makes the borough more attractive to business, bringing economic benefits and employment opportunities to our doorstep.

In less than two years we will be celebrating the world's biggest event, and Hackney's once-in-a-lifetime regeneration opportunity – the 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games. Only recently, the Government heralded a new 'silicon valley' east of the Old Street roundabout, that supports the Council's vision for the area. From Shoreditch to Hackney Wick, we are primed to benefit from the growth in creative and media industries, and are striving to create this legacy.

In order to benefit from this vision we need to maintain a well-educated workforce in the borough. In this respect our young people have done Hackney proud, continuing to break records, particularly with secondary schools beating the national average achievement at GCSE level. Despite many school building projects being cancelled across the country, we have secured Hackney's Building Schools for the Future funding so that pupils at all of our secondary and special schools will benefit from good, modern facilities in which to learn.

I was pleased that we were able to freeze Council Tax for residents for the fifth consecutive year but, as a result of the Government's decisions on the way in which they will tackle the national deficit, we now face major funding challenges. As Hackney Today goes to press we await the details of our allocation of Government funding for 2011-12. Whatever the outcome, it is clear the Government intends to scale back dramatically its financial support for councils such as Hackney.

The Council will continue to be on the side of residents in difficult times. I have been lobbying Government for fair funding for residents, and the Government minister in charge of local council grants is in no doubt of the effects the cuts will have unless they reconsider their approach. At the same time, whatever the final funding settlement from Government we will continue to prioritise the frontline services on which our residents rely. Over the next year, we will have to continually make the argument for communities such as ours. We will be stronger if we can do this together.

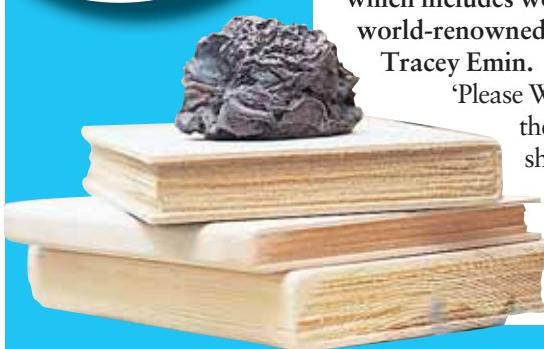

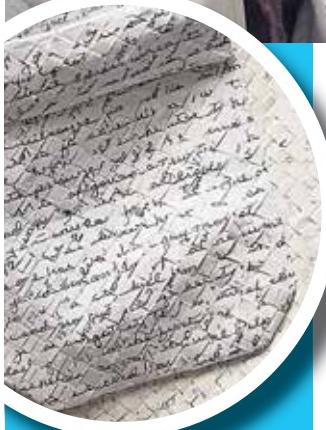

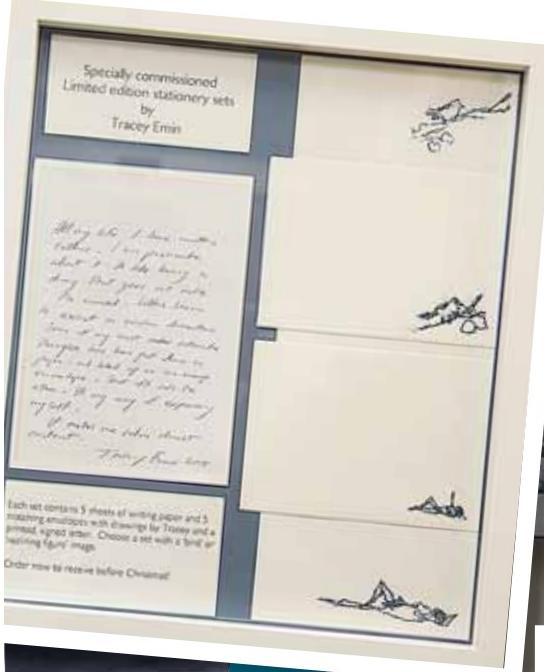

Finally, I hope that all residents will find something to cheer this Christmas, and will be able to enjoy the holiday period – and also spare a thought for those who will be working throughout, whether it's keeping hospitals open, roads clear, volunteering in night shelters and much more.

Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year

ART enthusiasts of all ages turned out for the opening of an exhibition celebrating the lost art of letter writing – which includes work by world-renowned artist Tracey Emin.

'Please Write' is the second show organised by the POSTED project in the former Post Office at 67 Wilton Way. The exhibition is directed and curated by Julia Royse. She said: "This exhibition has a melancholy feel about it, partly because it's lamenting the dying art of letter writing. But all the artists have made strong and thoughtful work, and I'm really pleased with it."

"We had a great turnout for the opening and I hope that people will come to see the show before Christmas – there are some great gifts."

POSTED is one of a number of projects supported by the Council's Empty Shops programme. It aims to provide activities in empty buildings, which will benefit residents and visitors to the borough.

Other current projects, funded through a Government grant, are a farm shop in Dalston, and an art space and reading room on a platform at Hackney Downs station.

Cllr Guy Nicholson, Cabinet Member for Regeneration and the 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games, said: "The scheme ensures that Hackney's creative community has an opportunity to showcase its talent."

Stationery sets designed by Tracey Emin for the show, which runs until 27 February, are currently on sale for £50.

Hackney Recruitment Partnership helps local people with learning disabilities find a route into work

Share the feeling

By
Marcel Reinard

SHARE The Feeling has been busy this month, selling gifts created by its employees – local people with learning difficulties.

Four residents are currently employed by the Hackney business to create gifts, which are sold online and at stalls and craft fairs.

They are also due to go on sale at Liberty of London from January. Known as the Chain Gang, the team work one day a week and are paid a fair wage.

Business owner, Angie Gough, said her aim was to create a profitable business that employed people with learning difficulties. Not sure where to start, she contacted Hackney Recruitment Partnership (HRP). Angie said: "They are fantastic and have just made it so easy for employers.

"They found me a list of candidates, organised their pay, provided a support worker and generally gave me advice about Council help that I didn't know about.

"Everyone gets paid, but it also builds confidence and the team have become good friends, seeing each other in their own time."

HRP is part of the Council's adult social care (ASC) services, which provides frontline support to vulnerable residents.

The service area recently received an overall 'excellent' rating from the Care Quality Commission, for the second year running.

It was rated as performing at an 'excellent' level in five of seven categories; and as performing 'well' in the other two.

“Everyone gets paid, but it also builds confidence and the team have become good friends”

The Commission highlighted the work of the First Response Provider Team, which supports residents to regain the ability to live independently after a stay in hospital; and the Council's work with lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender communities.

News in brief

Budget update

AS Hackney Today went to press, the Council expected to find out on 13 December how much money it will have to spend in the next financial year.

As reported in previous editions, the Council is faced with having to make savings of approximately £50-60million in the next financial year due to Government spending cuts. The Council will continue working hard to minimise the impact of Government cuts on its residents and staff and the protection of frontline services will remain its priority.

Memory box

If you have a boxer in the family, Hackney Museum would like to hear about them.

'East End Boxing Lives' is a new exhibition showcasing the history of the sport. Museum staff hope local people will add their memories, memorabilia and photographs to the existing collection.

It runs from 25 January to 30 April, and will explore the lives of famous boxers such as Jewish prizefighter Daniel Mendoza, and local boys Ron Cooper, Terry Spinks MBE, Sammy McCarthy, Johnny Kramer and Mickey Pye.

There's a chance to find out more about female boxers, who will compete for the first time at the 2012 Olympics; and the discrimination faced by Jewish and black boxers.

The display is the result of a project by the London Ex-Boxers Association, funded by a £50,000 grant from the Heritage Lottery Fund.

Residents can share memories and bring in exhibits at a workshop at the museum, on 7 January, from 1-4pm. For more info, call: 020 8356 2551; or e-mail: sue.mcalpine@hackney.gov.uk

THE Council kicked off a new campaign to encourage more people to join its eight libraries with some festive fun at the Hackney Central branch.

The 'Libraries for Life' Winter Fayre on 4 December saw usual Saturday visitor numbers rise by more than 60 per cent, with residents signing up to become members.

There was a chance to find out more about what services the library offers, and enjoy a range of activities, from head massage to jewellery making. Children also met Father Christmas, and tried to make Scrooge smile to win a prize.

Anyone joining the library or borrowing a book on the day was entered into a competition to win a family ticket to Hackney Empire's pantomime, 'Jack and the Beanstalk'.

Cabinet Member for Community Services, Cllr Jonathan McShane, said:

"The Council wants to encourage more people to join and use Hackney libraries.

"There is a lot on offer, from borrowing books and using the Internet, to reading groups and activities in the school holidays.

"We are holding a series of open days so you can talk to library staff. Come along, you might be surprised at what happens in your local library."

The next open day, a healthy living event, is due to take place at Stamford Hill Library on 13 January, from 3-7pm.

Sound advice

This isn't a tract, it's a leaflet
To show you the best way to shop,
So when you go shopping for Xmas,
Just walk to Wick Road and then stop.

You've no need to go to a market –
You've no need to wander up West –
For just here – in Wick Road, South Hackney –
There's clothes, food and drink of the best!

Where could you beat Frank Pitt's Bloater?
Where could you beat Cuthbert's Beer?
Where could you beat George's Haircuts?
Why nowhere! The best is right here!

What are you buying for Xmas?
That season of mirth and good cheer!
Whatever you want come to Wick Road,
You're certain to find it right here!

A sirloin of beef or a turkey
With sausage meat stuffing the breast?
Don't go wrong – go to Wright – that's the Butcher
Who sells nothing else but the best!

For pudding you'll want plums and currants,
And sugar, some peel and some spice,
Right next door is Chaney's – he's got them –
The best you can buy at the price.

For Flour there's Langford – Corn-chandler
Or else Watts near the top, Well Street way –
They'll both give you beans if you ask them –
Try their mixture to make your fowls lay!

Down the road, in the other direction,
Alf London has got a milk-shop;
He's the laziest man in the district –
But his milk's thick with cream on the top!

And just round the corner, in Church Road,
Lloyd's Dairy you quickly will find,
For eggs, butter, cheese you can't beat him,
Everything is the best of its kind!

And there is Breeson – greengrocer,
Good fruits he will quickly supply;
He won't say "Yes! We have no bananas!"
He's got them! The best you can buy!

If good fish is scarce, and you want it –
Don't go into Well Street and fail –
Here's Frank Pitt – Fishmonger, right here, sir!
He'll sell you a whelk – or a whale!

And the fish that he fries is so tasty,
It will bring quite a smile to your face;
I don't want to cod you at all, sir,
But for fish suppers this is the plaice!

And what about Bremmer, the Baker!
For one thing we'll give him his due –
Though he (k)needs all the bread that he bakes for himself,
He's willing to sell it to you!

New clothes! Well, there's Whiting and Beaver,
They make trousers and jacket and vest,
At prices that suit you exactly,
You'd pay double if you went up West!

For boots go to Blue or to Bolton,
Whose goods are of leather so stout,
Though you may say you won't wear them indoors, it's certain you can't wear them out!

The spirit of Hackney Wick past

A poem extolling the delights of Xmas shopping has come to light, but mystery surrounds the identity of the author and when it was first penned...

By Sally England,
Local Studies Librarian

THE printed sheet containing this festive poem about shopping in Wick Road was found in the home of Matilda Emma 'Tilly' Gibson (1864-1941) and Julia Hannah 'Totty' Gibson (1862-1962) at No.30 Hassett Road.

The sisters were both born at No.1 Well Street, the daughters of Richard and Hannah Gibson who ran a fishermonger's business at 227 Well Street.

Who wrote the poem or when it was written is not known, but a bit of detective work comparing the names of the retailers mentioned with entries in Post Office and Hackney street directories held in the Local Studies Library at Hackney Archives, has managed to locate most of the businesses, and suggests that it dates from around 1912-14.

It is illustrated here with a selection of photographs from the Archives' collection showing different views of Wick Road, Well Street, Church Road and Hassett Road over the years.

- The Archives would like to thank Ken Neale – 'Totty' Gibson's great nephew – of the Friends of Hackney Archives.

For ready-made-clothes, sheets or blankets—
Outfits for wife, daughter or son—
I'll tell you, at once, where to get them,
And the easiest way it is done!

Hassett Road! 58, is the number,
And Edward E Coleman the man!
Pay as you wear is his motto,
And weekly instalments his plan!

For Newspapers, pop into Chapman's,
The place where you get all the news!
He supplies the best brands of tobacco
To smoke or to eat, if you chews.

Don't forget to call on George, the Barber,
Any time – morning–eve–afternoon!
For you'll never look smart till you visit –
The Prince Edward Toilet Saloon.

His electric massage is delicious,
His shampoos – well they're simply great!
And the best thing of all, when you go there,
You never have long to wait!

You've good choice of sweets for the ladies,
And the babies like toffees and chocs,
You'll get them at Dixon's in Church Street,
Or off Brown at the Chocolate Box.

When the weather is cold, wet or frosty,
A good fire's the best friend you've got!
Get coals from J.Johnson, Coal Merchant,
In Bentham Road – right on the spot!

Are you insured? If not, why not?
You must not neglect that, you know!
You ask Harry Cooper, the Agent,
He'll jolly quick tell you so!

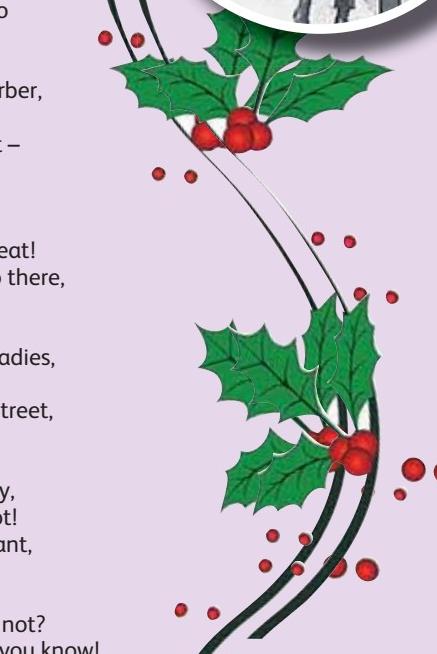

The renowned Royal London's his office,
And 2 Brampton Road's his address –
Insure with him now – It's as well, sir!
To be worth something dead you'll confess!

Do you know Trinick, the Chemist?
He's got quite a smart Druggist's store!
Where you can get pills, draughts and powders,
And toilet requisites galore!

And if buying things makes you thirsty,
There's Cuthbert's old corner pub near,
With fifty years' sound reputation,
For whiskies, good wines and good beer!

They sell the best glass of stout, sir,
You'll find if you travel all day;
But if you prefer Mann and Crossman's,
There's the Eagle just over the way!

In Wick Road, if you should go shopping,
There's only one thing you can't buy!
At present, we've no Undertaker,
So shop here, and never say die!

Dwayne Fields in the Arctic. The Stoke Newington resident successfully completed the Polar Challenge this year, becoming the first black Briton to reach the North Pole in the process

By
Marcel Reinard

FOR someone who has camped in the Arctic in -50°C temperatures, snowbound London must be a tad underwhelming.

"Snow isn't the problem; it's the wind," says Dwayne Fields, who became the first black British man to reach the North Pole in April.

Adding: "The wind comes directly from the Pole. If you're walking into it, you're in the right direction."

It also takes every ounce of warmth, but you can't let it hold you back. It's cold, it's windy, it's going to be nasty. You just get on with it."

Such determination helped him achieve his Arctic goal and it's evident when we meet in the snow – he's on crutches; with a broken leg suffered during a marathon.

His drive also stems from a pivotal moment when Dwayne and his brother had a loaded gun pointed at them. Fortunately, the weapon jammed.

The Stoke Newington resident and personal financial advisor reveals: "I'd also lost a friend to gun crime and I wanted to do something that said 'things need to change'. I wanted to do something unusual, abstract and inspirational."

So, with no experience of outdoor pursuits, he applied to join the Polar Challenge – a 350-nautical mile team-race to the North Pole. He underwent an intense

10-month training schedule, including enduring a -15°C cold chamber wearing nothing but shorts and a T-shirt.

"The day before I left I was asked if I was scared. It wasn't the cold I was scared of. My biggest worry was to have done all that and not finish," he says.

After a five-day walk from Resolute Bay, the last inhabitable space in Northern Canada, the race began in earnest.

An average day would start with Dwayne and his team mates warming up the tent using the cooker, packing up camp, then a three-hour walk or ski across the Arctic to cover 15 to 20 miles.

Sleep was cut down to just four or five hours a day. In such harsh conditions maintaining energy levels are key and he was eating up to 7,500 calories a day.

"When you have nothing to look forward to except resting, food is very appealing.

"I craved chicken biryanis and lamb kormas. Every time I ate the noodles, I'd complain about it," he admits.

"I remember one day it was -50°C, I had three pairs of mittens and two pairs of gloves on but I couldn't open my hands. It took 25 minutes to light the fire. For those minutes I got frustrated and wondered what I was doing there. But as soon as the match struck and there was fire...," he smiles. "It showed me no matter how bad things get, you can still get through it."

And yet Dwayne confesses that reaching the Pole was a let-down: "While it was amazing to get there, it was a bit of an anti-climax. Don't get me wrong, it's great to achieve your goal. But I had these preconceived ideas that there was going to be Northern Lights or a rainbow, but you get there and look down at the snow and think, 'well that's the same thing I saw 16 days ago,'" he says.

Dwayne prefers to concentrate on the journey, which included a rare sighting of a polar bear with two cubs. He describes another pivotal moment: "We only had a few inches between each other in the tent, so if one moved we'd all move, we were spending 24-hours a day together. I didn't like it, I was used to having my own space."

"At one point, walking over the frozen sea, there was literally nothing. There was no difference between land and sky. It dawned on me these are the only two people in my world at the moment. And I suddenly felt closer to them."

Back home, Dwayne has now begun raising funds for a trip to the South Pole. He also conducts talks around the country, often speaking to young people from African and Caribbean backgrounds.

He says: "I'm trying to use my experience to encourage and inspire. They can't always identify with the people who talk to them – they may think 'why should I listen to you?' But, whatever they're going through now, I've gone through it. Stabbings, shootings, fights. They can look at me and think: 'Yeah, this guy kind of knows. He looks like me, sounds like me and, to a degree, acts like me. But then he's gone and done something that's not the usual'."

THE GREEN GENIE

All your recycling questions answered

Q: I have my family coming over this year for Christmas and I will have a lot of rubbish to recycle. What should I do with it all?

A: If you use the Council's Green Box collection scheme make extra space by grouping the same materials together and folding up cardboard. You can also order a net cover to contain items in the box, making more space at the top. Alternatively, put recycling in labelled plastic bags next to your Green Box or order an extra one.

If you live in a flat, keep recycling separate in your kitchen and take this down to local recycling bins as often as needed over the festive period.

Residents can use the borough's 70 'bring sites'

There are also over 70 street recycling sites located around the borough where residents can bring materials for recycling. To order a Green Box or net cover, or to request recycling facilities for your residential development call: 020 8356 6688.

Cook or compost leftover Brussels sprouts, and recycle Christmas cards for a greener festive season

All stories by
Sarah Menz

THE Council is encouraging residents to lighten the load in their waste bins this Christmas by recycling.

It is estimated that more than three million tonnes of rubbish is created in Britain over the festive period, half of which could be recycled.

In Hackney, cardboard packaging for presents,

“With so many recycling services available to residents, we can all do our bit to reduce waste”

empty jars of traditional favourites like cranberry sauce, the foil from the turkey, as well as Christmas cards can all be recycled through the Council's Green Box scheme, or at recycling banks on estates.

Charity The Woodland Trust also runs a Christmas card recycling scheme – look out for collection bins around Hackney in January.

Use up food scraps and leftovers to make new recipes, using the Love Food Hate Waste website.

Alternatively, many residents can use the Blue Bin or estates food recycling service.

Cllr Feryal Demirci, Cabinet Member for Neighbourhoods, said: "With so many recycling services available to residents, we can all do our bit to reduce waste over the festive period."

No festive changes to recycling service

Recycling should be left out at street level. Residents can request assistance if they cannot carry the boxes themselves

RECYCLING and refuse collection services in Hackney will continue as normal during the Christmas and New Year period.

Residents should still put out recycling and waste on their regular collection day – but are asked to spare a thought for collection crews in the icy weather. In winter, the risk of a trip or fall is much higher for staff who visit thousands of properties every week.

Carrying Green Boxes also makes it more difficult to see where to tread safely.

So do your bit to help keep your crew safe and on the move by ensuring that Green Boxes and food waste containers are left at pavement level, in a clearly visible location from the road, by 7.30am on collection day.

Green tree from start to finish

THIS year, why not choose a tree that helps rural African communities affected by climate change – and recycle it after Christmas.

For every tree sold by the Christmas Forest in Stoke Newington, another will be planted by charity Tree Aid's 'Forests for Food' project in Ethiopia, where new trees can provide shade, food, medicines, tools and fuel – for life.

Since 2006, the Christmas Forest has donated over £47,000 towards Tree Aid planting projects.

When the tree has served its time, leave it next to your Brown Bin for recycling. Residents who do not have this service can drop their tree off at Millfields Waste Depot, Millfields Road, E5, between 28 December and 15 January.

Alternatively, arrange for it to be collected through the Council's bulky waste service.

Shop local this Xmas

A fruit and veg stall at Ridley Road Market

RESIDENTS looking for a locally sourced Christmas dinner can buy it direct from producers at Stoke Newington Farmers' Market.

It will be business as usual on 18 December; and then for last-minute food and gifts, there will be an extra market on 23 December from 5pm to 8.30pm. Food from the market – run by community-led food producer Growing Communities – cuts down on food miles and packaging, as well as helping farmers stay in business. Hackney's vibrant markets are a great place to pick up food for Christmas, and there will also be Christmas Eve shopping at Ridley Road, Hoxton, Well Street and Broadway markets. Domestic violence affects one in four women in their lifetime

Domestic violence survivor Nas and her daughter are rebuilding their lives together

By
Felicity Jump

DOESTIC violence affects one in four women in their lifetime, and can involve physical, sexual or mental abuse by a partner or family member.

Nas* met her husband on holiday. They married in 2006 and moved to London, where Nas' husband was living.

The violence started after a month of marriage.

Nas says: "He used jealousy as an excuse to control me. He once locked me in the house for two days while he went abroad. I couldn't go anywhere. I didn't even speak English."

Nas became pregnant, but this didn't stop the violence, and in 2008 she left her husband for the first time. However, two months later Nas returned, after her husband begged her to come back.

She says: "I wanted to learn English and make a better life for us. He was better for four months and I started an English course. But then it started again."

After a beating left her bruised and in pain, Nas decided it was time to take control, she says: "I just thought 'no-one can do it for me. I have to do something, for me and for my child.'

Nas then began to plan how to leave for good.

She explains: "I asked my mum to look after my daughter, and told my husband our daughter was going on holiday with her grandmother. Then I left him."

Nas stayed with a friend while she tried to find a

Nas moved into temporary accommodation and, this January, she got her own flat where she is successfully rebuilding her life. Her daughter has started daycare and is making friends.

Nas is now divorced, and is feeling happy and positive about her future.

A Palace For Us

15 Dec, 11am-1pm, Rio Cinema, 107 Kingsland Rd, E8

Tom Hunter's new film, A Palace For Us, documents 50 years of life on Woodberry Down estate through the testimonies of long-term residents, some of whom have lived there since the creation of the borough's post-war housing developments.

Personal memories begin with the bombing of Stoke Newington during the Blitz and continue to the present day as Woodberry Down continues its major regeneration. A preview screening takes place at Rio on 15 December with the film also being shown at the Serpentine Gallery, W2 until 20 January 2011.

PREVIEW*Jack & The Beanstalk*Until 9 Jan, Hackney Empire, 291 Mare Street, E8

Having the attention span of a goldfish, if there's one thing that gives focus, it's seeing Clive Rowe perform in full dame mode. If his superb song voice and comic timing weren't enough, it's keeping up with his blistering amount of dress changes.

Synopsis for Jack & the Beanstalk: 'a rollercoaster ride'. Within minutes you're strapped in and repeatedly battered into submission by lights, jokes, puffs of smoke, music numbers and double-entendres. An extended back-story puts meat on the well-known tale, adding a couple of naughty imps, a Robin Hood element, a few swipes about Government cuts and of course a bigger role for Jack's mother, Clive. Director Susie McKenna sprinkles her usual pixie dust of pop culture, and even brings smiles by restaging a famously unpopular TV ad.

Kiss FM's Kat B also shines as the excellent though nonsensical West Indian 'Snowman' – an exclamation mark because the outlandish character probably wouldn't have it any other way. Be prepared for another enjoyable production to leave you exhausted but satisfied when the curtain falls. For more, visit: www.hackneyempire.co.uk

Shoreditch Winter Festival

Various, E1, until 13-18 Dec and 5-7 Jan

Spitalfields Music sets itself an admirable goal trying to convert more people to classical music. For more than 30 years the company has entertained East London with local community talent, but arguably faces stiff competition to attract new audiences – vying against new styles of music and the many genres from around the world.

This winter, the Shoreditch Winter Festival claims to be an alternative festive offering, focusing on the musical sound of storytelling, and reminding attendees of some of the weird and wonderful fables that historically were put to music.

Highlights for the festival include tracking Monteverdi's musical departure from the Renaissance world to the Baroque; Fables, a part-opera, part-film created by some of the country's leading composers and filmmakers working with Streetwise Opera performers; young artists presenting an early evening of music-making; and Women Sing East, a 40-strong female choir performing a medley of contemporary choral music, arrangements of popular folk and jazz tunes as well as a sprinkling of festive songs to celebrate the season.

Green role models

The awards saw students take to the catwalk to showcase clothes they had designed and created from old clothes

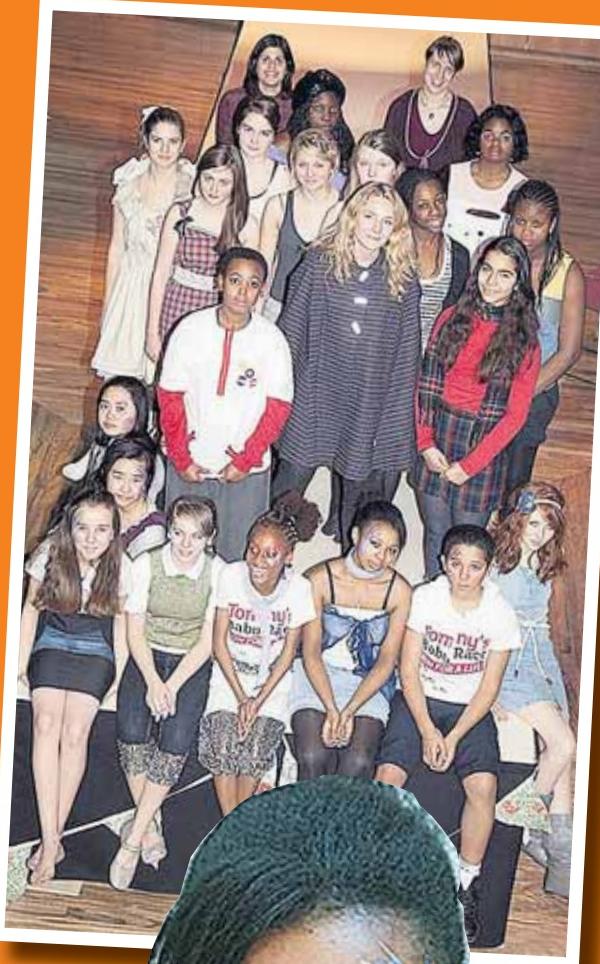

By

Marcel Reinard

A GLAMOROUS catwalk show at Stoke Newington Town Hall demonstrated how fashion can be both fun and green.

Students from Stoke Newington, Hackney Free and Parochial, and Horizon schools showed off designs made from old clothes in a bid to 'shrink their fashion footprint' for the Hackney Re-made project organised by The Learning Trust, Council, and fashion recycling charity TRAID.

The event on 2 December was part of the trust's annual Green Heroes awards, which commends pupils, families and staff for helping schools to be more sustainable. There were 14 overall winners plus two eco-teams and 24 specially commended individuals.

Their green acts ranged from switching off lights in classrooms, producing vegetables for the school kitchen, tending school gardens and building a wind turbine.

Imogen Hathaway, eight, from Queensbridge School, won the primary category for never missing a day watering the school flower beds and hanging baskets. She said: "I really enjoy working outside and being green and I have learnt lots of things about the garden."

News in brief

Vicki tops the talent pool

A HACKNEY swimming teacher has won a prestigious award for her work getting over 50s into the pool.

Vicki Carter received a gold in the top teacher of the year category at the Kellogg's ASA Swimbastic Awards on 20 November.

The Kings Hall Leisure Centre teacher was praised for leading the ASA Free Swimming initiative in the borough, and for 'her patient and encouraging style which ensures swimmers turn up regularly for lessons'.

She also organises an awards ceremony to honour their successes.

Vicki Carter accepts her award from Olympic diver Nick Robinson-Baker

Vicki works for social enterprise GLL which runs the Council's leisure centres. GLL also received a silver award for Facility Operator of the Year.

HCC launches alumni network

FROM Lord Sugar to members of The Sex Pistols, Hackney Community College (HCC) has seen many iconic figures pass through its doors.

Now the college in Hoxton has set-up a network, HCC Alumni & Friends, to bring together former students.

Luminaries at the launch night on 24 November included fashion designer Rhiannon Jones, and Speaker of Hackney Cllr Sally Mulready, who studied at the college's Aysrome Road site in 1968. She said: "If I can do anything, I will. HCC gave me the inspiration, the aspiration and the determination that I didn't have. Without the start in life that this college gave me, I wouldn't have got to where I have today." To sign up, e-mail: hccalumni@hackney.ac.uk

Tree of knowledge planted

AN OFF-SHOOT of the famous apple tree that Isaac Newton sat under when he began formulating his theory of gravity has been planted at The City Academy.

The symbolic Flower of Kent tree is the first for the school's new community orchard, and it is hoped it will become a long-standing inspiration for current and future students. The Academy is now looking for volunteers to care for the orchard.

If you are interested, or for more info, contact Mathilde Favier on: 020 8252 5440.

Signs of the times

On November 10, Hackney resident and YH World writer, Nick Adams, 26, made the journey from Teeside University to a London protest against Government plans to charge up to £9,000 a year in tuition fees. This is his edited report.

OUR arrival in London replaced our fatigue with a sense of excitement and anticipation.

As our coach parked by the Victoria Embankment, we could see students walking alongside the River Thames on their way to the start of the march.

With more than 50,000 students present, the march took a while to get some movement going.

In the meantime, this gave me the perfect opportunity to look at all the signs and banners on display.

The most common signs gave a direct and simple message about the marchers views of education cuts.

There were a variety of very lighthearted signs, such as one that read 'tuition fees make kitten sad'.

Gradually, students began to move. There was definitely a tangible energy in the air and it was liberating to march past famous political landmarks such as Downing Street and the Houses of Parliament.

There were also a variety of interesting costumes worn by some of the more creative protesters.

The good humour continued with the occasional musical instrument brought along to the march. A guy cheerfully played staccato phrases on his trombone in between the chanting.

The most common chant was: 'No ifs, no buts, no education cuts'.

Then there was the more worrying: 'You cut back, we fight back'.

Later in the day, there was a serious incident at the Conservative Party's Millbank headquarters in central London, where there was vandalism and riots.

It's amazing how the actions of the few can taint the actions of the many.

Generally though it was a very peaceful, successful protest.

And a very serious message was delivered: most students can't afford the rise in tuition fees and education cuts.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Help shape Young Hackney

MEMBERS of the Hackney Youth Parliament are seeking young people's views on activities and support available for 11 to 19-year-olds in the borough.

Hackney's 2010 Youth Service survey is one of the first pieces of work undertaken by new Hackney Youth Parliament members, elected in October. They will be working on the project with the Council's Youth Service. The responses will give a picture of the issues that most concern young people, and the information gathered will help to improve services and shape future provision. The deadline for completing the survey is 22 December. To take part, visit: www.younghackney.org/survey2010. Enter your contact details at the end for a chance to win £30 in Love to Shop vouchers.

Heptathlete Denise Lewis was on hand to open the new high-tech maternity and newborn centre at Homerton hospital

All stories by Marcel Reinard

AN OLYMPIC gold medallist was on hand to open a £17.3million high-tech maternity and newborn centre at Homerton hospital.

Heptathlete Denise Lewis opened the centre on 6 December. It is now among the best equipped in London for expectant mothers and babies, and its service capacity has been doubled.

Around £12.5million

has been invested by the hospital to provide new cots in its special care baby unit and neonatal intensive care unit; en suite birthing rooms; birthing pools; more antenatal and post natal beds for mums; and en suite family accommodation.

Infrastructure firm and Olympic sponsor GE donated equipment worth £4.8million, including a £1million MRI scanner; ultra-sound and X-ray units; incubators with warmers and phototherapy lights.

Denise said: "As a mother and an Olympian I think it is great news to see

“It’s great news to see such an investment in the improvement of maternal and infant care in the area” such an investment in the improvement of maternal and infant care in the area. This will be a great legacy for the people of East London."

Nancy Hallett, Homerton Chief Executive, added: "The new high-tech facilities will help all the babies born at Homerton, especially those who need special care.

"Who knows, maybe one of them will be a medal winner in years to come and fulfil that Olympic legacy."

Mark Elborne, UK GE Chief Executive, said: "We decided to make this donation to Homerton hospital because it is one of the designated London 2012 hospitals."

Disabled people lead the way

Disability BackUp members led councillors and MP Meg Hillier through Hackney Central

HACKNEY councillors and an MP were guided through borough pathways earlier this month to experience a day in the life of a disabled resident.

Local disabled people led the way through Church Street, N16; the Narroway, E8; and Well Street, E9. Organised by members of Disability BackUp, a forum for local disabled people funded by the Council, the event formed part of International Day for Disabled People on 3 December.

An evening award show and party at City Edge, E8, concluded the day, with the broadcast of a round-up programme created by Disability BackUp member Thamasin Marsh.

News in brief

Awareness of alcohol dangers

RESIDENTS are encouraged to watch their alcohol consumption over the festive period. NHS City and Hackney, with the Council, has created a series of posters on the theme 'Be Safe, Be Merry' to raise awareness of safety during the party season.

The posters urge revellers to eat before drinking, keep track of how many they've had, and plan the journey home. The NHS highlighted an iPhone application that helps keep track of your drinking over time. NHS guidance suggests men and women should not drink more than 3-4 and 2-3 units a day, respectively.

The NHS is also asking residents to think about which health services they need to get the right care over Christmas. It points to pharmacies, walk-in centres and NHS Direct for expert advice instead of automatically dialing 999 or going to A&E.

Uniting for World Aids Day 2010

ORGANISATIONS across the borough joined forces to mark World Aids Day on 1 December.

The programme of events at Hackney Community College (HCC) aimed to raise awareness of the disease through discussions, a quiz, condom demonstration and personal testimony from a young person living with HIV.

Volunteers also ran an information stall in the college canteen and promoted HIV screening sessions led by charity Positive East at the Geffrye Museum, every Wednesday, from 3-6pm.

Staff from NHS City and Hackney, HCC, and Hackney African Forum (HAF) helped run the day. HAF is set to hold another World Aids Day awareness event on 18 December, from 2-7pm, at Anatolia People's Cultural Centre, N16. It is estimated that nationally a third of people with HIV are not diagnosed.

By Ruth Garland

T has been more than two years since the borough was awarded Fairtrade status – and the Council is urging more businesses to sign up and become part of its online Fairtrade shopping guide.

Hackney is home to London's first Fairtrade school, Jubilee primary, and a Fairtrade church, St John-at-Hackney, where even the Communion Wine is Fairtrade.

Parish Administrator, Emily Ovenden, said: "We have a stall after

"We see it as our responsibility to encourage the fair treatment of farmers in the third world"

Sunday morning service, and sell various Fairtrade products. We see it as our responsibility to be a Fairtrade provider and encourage the fair treatment of farmers in the Third World."

Residents who are keen to buy Christmas food and drink, gifts, clothes, flowers and even wrapping paper can invest in items that are certified as meeting internationally agreed standards for the people who produce them.

Remy Zentar, owner of L'Epicerie deli and cafe on Chatsworth Road, is one of a growing number of independent businesses which stock a range of Fairtrade products, from rice, teas and convenience foods, to wines and chocolates. All coffee served at L'Epicerie is Fairtrade. Remy said: "The company I source my coffee from supports a school on Mount Kilimanjaro in Tanzania.

"I've travelled in Africa and the Middle East and I used to live in Brazil, so I'm aware that if we all work together we can make a difference."

Shoreditch-based Liberation, the world's only 100 per cent Fairtrade nut company, is 42 per cent owned by its suppliers, and operates globally, sourcing nuts from 22,000 farmers at co-operatives in Africa, Asia and Latin America. Their best known product is endorsed by Harry Hill.

Model of fairness

PEMBURY Estate resident Kaysha Wright, 19, (above) was picked by world-renowned photographer Trevor Leighton to take part in a campaign to mark the fifth anniversary of Fairtrade cotton. Kaysha, who has been modelling 'on and off' since she was 15, joined celebrities including TV presenter Lisa Snowdon and supermodel Laura Bailey at a catwalk event last month.

For more info visit: www.fairtrade.org.uk

Cllr Ian Rathbone, Hackney Fairtrade Group Co-ordinator, said: "It's great to see lots of businesses in the borough stocking Fairtrade goods, but we would like to see many more."

Hackney's number-one ethical sleuth

IMADE Osagie, 11, a Year Six pupil at Harrington Hill Primary School, won a box of Fairtrade goodies when she was named Hackney's top Fairtrade Detective.

The pilot scheme, which ran in the borough over the summer, aimed to raise awareness by asking children to identify Fairtrade products.

Participants were asked to pick up a detective's form from their local library and find out where Fairtrade products were on offer. Imade submitted 17 detective forms; visited seven different supermarkets; and noted 127 Fairtrade items.

The Fairtrade Detective scheme will be officially launched during Fairtrade Fortnight from 28

February to 13 March next year.

Imade's mother, Hawa Deen-Osagie said: "She got her siblings involved, and even her dad.

"Just because of this, we have changed to Fairtrade cocoa."

Recipes straight from the ovens at Waterhouse
www.waterhouserestaurant.co.uk

THE festive season is a great time to get the family together and enjoy some classic Christmas recipes. One of the real highlights is Boxing Day bubble and squeak which is an excellent dish for reducing waste and making the most of any leftovers from the traditional Christmas Day lunch.

Boxing Day originated from the 'Christmas Boxes' given to Victorian tradesmen in the 19th century as reward for their services over the year. In this spirit, Waterhouse Restaurant would like to thank all its customers for their support this year and hope you all enjoy the best of the season.

Boxing Day bubble & squeak

Serves 5

Ingredients

- 500g mashed potato
- 400g mixed vegetables – carrots, brussels sprouts, cabbage, parsnips
- 6 rashers of bacon
- 1 red onion
- Stuffing
- 30g cheese
- 1 tbsp olive oil
- 2 garlic cloves, finely chopped
- Salt and black pepper

Preparation time
10 minutes

Cooking time
15 minutes

Method

- Chop up the vegetables and add to the mashed potatoes and cheese to make the bubble and squeak mixture
- Heat the oil in a frying pan and add the onion, garlic and bacon. Cook on a medium heat until softened
- Melt the butter in the pan and add the mixture. Press down in the pan and cook on a low-medium heat for 10 minutes
- Cook until the bottom of the mixture has browned and turn regularly to get an even crispness
- Serve with a poached egg and pull a cracker

Licensing review

A 12-WEEK consultation on a licensing policy for the borough revealed that the majority of people who responded were against creating more areas with tighter restrictions.

The Council's aim was to strengthen its ability to ensure that Hackney's licensed premises are well managed by extending a Special Policy Area (SPA) in Shoreditch; and creating two new ones in Dalston and Stoke Newington.

In total, 1,071 people responded. Of these, 72.2 per cent were opposed to extending the SPA in Shoreditch; 77 per cent opposed the introduction of a SPA in Dalston; and 75.3

The SPA already in place in Shoreditch will not be extended per cent didn't support a SPA in Stoke Newington.

As a result, the Council will not be introducing new SPA areas in Hackney.

An amended licensing policy was approved by the Council on 24 November and comes into effect on 7 January. It tightens up regulations covering the existing Shoreditch SPA area. It also outlines the steps the Council expects licensees to take, in order to drive down crime, disorder and public nuisance. The policy is reviewed at least every three years.

The amended licensing policy will be available to read online from 7 January. For more info call: 020 8356 2431; or e-mail licensing@hackney.gov.uk; the full consultation report is available at: www.consultationfinder.com/hackney

The Mayor and Councillors

Councillors are elected by Hackney residents and serve for four years. The last borough elections were in May 2010.

Councillors have a range of responsibilities, including helping to oversee the Council and its services. They hold advice surgeries where residents can meet their local representative and ask them to take up issues that may be of concern.

Generally they can help with Council related matters, but if the issue is the responsibility of another person or organisation, councillors can often point people in the right direction and tell residents who they need to see. Hackney has 57 councillors representing areas called wards – illustrated in the map opposite.

To check which councillor covers your area, or confirm surgery times, call: 020 8356 3373.

The Mayor

Jules Pipe

Hackney has an executive Mayor, Jules Pipe, who is not a councillor, but is directly elected by the entire borough. The Mayor is the political leader of the Council, overseeing the budget and all Council services. Civic and ceremonial duties are undertaken by the Speaker of the Council who is elected annually from the borough's 57 councillors. The current Speaker is Cllr Sally Mulready.
